Don't Be Fooled By Phony IRAs As advisers to buy IRAs for clients, we advise them not to follow phony IRA promoters. There are a number of frauds out there that involve empty shell corporations, fake web sites, and the like. Perhaps you've already fallen victim to one of these frauds. If you have, you can save yourself a great deal of future grief by reading this article. Below we'll give you the warning signs to look for in an IRA salesman. One of the most common scams is "The Grass is Greener" scam. Many times, the fraudster will create a fake web site like which says the "Grass IS greener on the other side" of the Atlantic Ocean or some similar message. The fraudster might be a middle-aged, balding guy who has emigrated from Ireland with a thick Irish accent. He may have a hyphenated last name and he will offer to help you with your IRA and make a quick $1,000. The salesman might offer you a list of investment options, but he won't provide you with specifics or facts about any of the investments. This is because there is no such thing as a sure thing. The salesman might say that he just received his MBA from Yale and that he "can't make mistakes." He might tell you that he can "guarantee" returns or equity appreciation "over the past decade." If he does, he is either lying to you or he is an idiot. The legitimate IRA providers can't make such claims. Sometimes returns are better than "X percent" or "X dollars" or "X percent appreciation per year" because they are paid to do a good job with your money and are as skilled as any financial professional. The only "guarantee" you should be entitled to is that if you follow the directions given by the IRA provider, you will receive a return comparable to the average investor. The bottom line: you should not be selling any investment to clients that is not something that you would be willing to do with your own money. We're not saying you need to be a rocket scientist. Just be smart and educate yourself. Perhaps read some of our many articles on the subject. So, what to do? 1. First, ask the "salesperson" a number of
